- promote health and well-being by providing quality nursing care across a variety of contexts and with diverse populations;
- be accountable and ethical Registered Nurses who provide care and make decisions based on relationships with others, nursing knowledge and other forms of inquiry;
- demonstrate leadership that influences Registered Nursing practice and health care at professional, social, environmental, economic, and political levels by anticipating and responding to the changing needs of society;
- engage in intentional critical inquiry and self-reflection to facilitate life-long learning;
- contribute Registered Nursing knowledge and be a voice to interprofessional and team based collaborations to optimize health outcomes and strengthen health services and systems; and
- be shaped by understanding the historical and current social realities that result in Indigenous-specific racism, and which negatively impact Indigenous health and well-being.
